

PANIC ON A FERRYBOAT.

Passengers rush for life-preservers. The bow of the Clyde steamer Iroquois cuts into the cabin of the Colorado. An accident which came near resulting in the loss of many lives occurred yesterday morning on the East River. The ferryboat Colorado, which runs between Roosevelt Island, this city, and Broadway, Brooklyn, was leaving its slip on the New York side at 1:45 o'clock, when the Clyde line steamer Iroquois, Captain L. W. Pennington, which had just arrived from New York, and was backing into her slip at the New York pier of Broadway, moved forward as if to pass her bow across the ferryboat's bow, thus threatening the Colorado from getting out.
